EDISON TAKES HIS VACATION.

Says Sensible Vacations are Taken Amid Untrodden Ways.

Thomas A. Edison, inventor, declares that all sensible vacations are spent amid untrodden ways. Complete rest and recreation are only had in the tranquilizing solitudes of forests, far from the busy hum of men.

Edison, with H. S. Firestone, the rubber man, and John Burroughs, the naturalist and writer, is now on his vacation in the Adirondacks. They are roughing it in the wilds.

The party does not plan to spend the entire vacation in one spot. There are several places Mr. Edison has in mind that are not known to the ordinary mountain tourist and they plan to move from one to another.

"I'm glad these places are not known or popular," said Mr. Edison, "because they would soon lose their charm. Solitude and seclusion is what we want and when auto parties begin to flock through many parts they lose their greatest beauty."

"I'm a chemist and so I'm to be the cook. Each member of the party has his duties and he'll have to look after them. I'm the cook. Firestone is the camp story teller and Burroughs is

Mr. Edison is also the guide. No fishing rods were taken because, says Mr. Edison, for fishing rod you can't beat a birch rod and a bent pin. Quite

Inspiration of Ardmore Citizen Resulted in the Building of a College

A pretty story which reaches us from Dallas will be interesting to many Ardmore people. Fred Trask, son of Major W. W. Trask of this city, now resides in Dallas. He is with the Southland Life Insurance Company and is doing nicely and has a happy family surrounding him.

It was in the year 1894 that Major Trask came from New York into Texas. He developed the first asphalt mine ever developed in that state and it was th asphalt about this city that finally resulted in making this his home. Soon after the arrival of Major Trask he was attracted to a school teacher. The teacher was plodding along in the usual way, drawing a salary of less than $100 a month, but Major thought he saw bigger material in him. Accordingly he outlined to this teacher the establishment of a private school. The teacher took to the idea and Major Trask helped him in a financial way to get his institution started. It was called Peacock's School and was for boys only. Fred Trask was pupil No. 1 in the first class that was organized. The school was established in San Antonio, now 22 years ago. It has remained in the same city. It has grown some every year; it has expanded; it has been made more useful and the founder has determined that Peacock's School shall live when its founder is gone.

On a recent trip to Dallas the founder of the school, Dr. J. S. Lankford, met his first pupil. He was entertained in the home of the pupil, and in order to make his school permanent he gave Mr. Trask an order for a $25,000 policy in favor of the school.

Mr. Trask has proven to be one of the most valuable men in the employ of the Southland. He is the man who writes the big policies and does the big business.

A new feature in insurance has been inaugurated in the past few years. That feature is the insuring of a business against the loss of the life of the chief executive of the business. There was brought to light an instance of this kind in Oklahoma a short time ago when the life of Mr. Cosden was insured for a million dollars, made payable to the Cosden Refining Corporation.
